RAF Bombs German and Italian Industrial Areas

One of Mightiest Attacks Unloosed as Fliers Slash At Both Ends of the Axis

Communications and Naval Bases Are Hit in Grand Assault by Royal Air Force Bombers

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 24.—In one of the mightiest attacks yet in its ever-broadening offensive, the RAF drove home slashing overnight blows at both ends of the Rome-Berlin Axis from Turin, Italy, to the Nazi-held Continental coast by way of Berlin, the Air Ministry announced today.

Another heavy attack opened on the coast tonight in the Boulogne area. As the attack spread, the coastline was lit up for miles by anti-aircraft fire and by flares dropped by the RAF as they searched out their targets.

An hour after the raids started the fighting was still going on and England's shores were lined with men and women watching the distant battle of planes and anti-aircraft guns.

Leave Blazing Destruction

From yesterday's dusk to today's dawn British bombers kept at it and returned home with accounts of blazing destruction left in such vital objectives as Berlin's Pulitzstrasse and Lehrter freight yards, Essen's sprawling Krupp works and the Royal Italian Arsenal and the Fiat works at Turin.

Other targets included Leipzig and Duisburg-Ruhrort in Germany; and Boulogne, Brest and Lorient in German-occupied France. All got incendiary and heavy demolition bombs and returning pilots said at least one huge fire was observed at each place.

Describing the Berlin raid, the Air Ministry News Service said the attacking planes reached the German capital before 8 p. m. and started at least ten big fires in the Pulitzstrasse and the Lehrter freight yards.

Rail Yards Bombed

Another formation bombed the rail yards between Berlin's Potsdamer and Anhalter stations with 1,000 incendiary and numerous explosives it related. One pilot said one direct hit was scored on the Potsdamer station, causing fires followed by three explosions.

In the early evening raid on Essen, the Air Ministry related, fierce fires were started and were visible for twenty miles. One pilot reported one large fire and two smaller ones set off in the very center of the Krupp works there while another said his bombs caused a tremendous, 10-second explosion.

At Turin, fires were declared started by incendiaries which guided bomb-laden planes to the targets.

Still other squadrons blasted at German naval bases in Northern and Western France and concentrated on a torpedo boat station at Lorient, a power station and dry-docks at Brest, and harbor works and railway approaches at Boulogne where several explosions were reported.

Rome Predicts New Offensive in the Balkans

Demand for Showdown with Turkey Is Made by Fascist Press

By The Associated Press

ROME, Nov. 24.—A new military offensive in Southeastern Europe was hinted today by the authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, as a follow-up to Rumania's formal alliance with the Axis.

A demand for a showdown with Turkey, backed by the might of German, Rumanian and Bulgarian armies, appeared to observers as the only event Gayda could have had in mind when he wrote in La Voce D'Italia:

"A new chapter in Axis political action which will shortly be followed by important new pages and normal warlike events shows that Axis initiative continues in the political conduct of the war."

With the entrance of Hungary and Rumania into the Axis military pact last week, Gayda pointed out, only Turkey and Greece remain outside the Axis orbit.

He listed Bulgaria as being virtually as good as in, and Yugoslavia as "benevolently neutral." With Italy now fighting Greece, Turkey, therefore, appeared to remain the only country at which new warlike action in Southeastern Europe might be aimed unless Germany or one of the new Axis Allies attacked Greece from the East.

The Belgrade, Yugoslavia, press today warned Bulgarian revisionists against engaging in any adventures aimed at annexing territory in Southern Yugoslavia.

The Italian high command's communique today said Fascist troops in Albania were moving into new positions under Greek fire from artillery and machine-guns and declared "the enemy vainly tried to hinder the maneuvers of our troops, which are proceeding regularly."

In the retreat from Koritza, the high command said, the Italians saved all their arms, artillery and munitions, the Greeks capturing only some barbed wire entanglements.

The high command acknowledged another air raid on Turin and Liguria but said there were neither victims nor damage. On the other hand, it said, the Italians had shot down eight British planes in air raids, six of them over Malta.

Life Spanned Period of Emergence from Medieval Insularity

OKITSU, Japan, Nov. 24.—The last of Japan's Genro, or elder statesmen, Prince Kimmochi Saionji, whose ninety-one years of life spanned the whole period of Japan's emergence from medieval insularity to rank among the great economic and military states of the modern world, died today.

He had been ill at his home, a few hours train journey from Tokyo, since Nov. 13.

Nazi Planes Fail in Effort To Penetrate London Defenses

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(P)—The Germans lunged unsuccessfully at London today and peppered the Kent coast "Hell's corner" with air bombs and shells from long range guns across the channel, then with the sitting sun launched their nightly assault on the capital.

All in all, it was a quiet day and Nazi formations attempting to stab through London's defenses were "promptly met and dispersed by our fighters," the Air Ministry announced.

The day's subdued activity followed a night of heavy attacks lasting several hours on a town in Southern England where the government announced a number of people were killed and considerable damage done.

Women Seek Way To End All Wars

Report Says It Is Principal Challenge Confronting Them

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(P)—The principal challenge confronting women today is the task of finding a way to end wars, said a report prepared for the Women's Centennial Congress, opening tomorrow.

The three-day session, attended by delegates prominent in education, politics, business, labor and club work, commemorates a century of organized effort to end discrimination against women.

Mrs. Dana C. Backus, chairman of the committee on world peace through world organization, said that a ten-month study emphasized that women of the world, in attacking the problem of quelling war, must meet, among others, these challenges:

"Face the problem of war and peace with intelligence as well as with emotion, and with a knowledge that violence will continue to break out whenever the means of peaceful settlement are absent or have failed."

"Distinguish between the basic causes of war and the parasitic forces, such as the munition industries, which thrive on international chaos and become the spectacular elements of war."

Attack Brings Sea War to Outskirts of Neutrality Zone

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(P)—A phantom sea raider shelled the British Steamer Port Hobart off the West Indies today, invading a crossroad of Great Britain's extended sea lanes.

The attack accompanied an intensification of the submarine siege of England by the Axis powers in which one U-boat dared the home waters of the British fleet to torpedo an unidentified victim near Ireland.

The assault on the Port Hobart, a vessel usually in the England-Australia trade via the Panama canal, again brought the sea war to the outskirts of the neutrality zone set up by the Pan-American republics.

Sights Suspicious Vessel
Plowing through waters where Britain's sea-borne commerce from South America converges with vessels from the Atlantic, the 9,430-ton freighter was 500 miles Northwest of Puerto Rico—approximately seventy-five miles outside the neutrality belt—when it flashed word it had sighted a "suspicious vessel."

That was at 10:17 a. m. (EST). Twenty-five minutes later Mackay Radio picked a second terse signal from the Port Hobart:

"Being shelled by raider."

Silence then hid the fate of the freighter and the identity of its attacker, which shipping circles said might be one of Germany's two known Pocket Battleships or one of a dozen fast Nazi freighters thought by maritime men to have been armed and sent forth to prey on British shipping.

The attack marked the first appearance of a surface raider since Nov. 5, when a German warship of the Admiral Graf Spee class leisurely attacked a 38-ship convoy midway between Newfoundland and Ireland.

Ways of Reducing Cost of Food To Be Studied by the Government

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(P)—A study to eliminate any illegal monopolistic practices which might tend to reduce the cost of food on the table and to increase the income of farmers who produce it was announced today by the Justice department.

Following up a similar inquiry into the cost of home-building begun some months ago, the department said particular attention would be directed to the prices of bread, milk, meat, fish, cheese and fruits and vegetables, both canned and fresh.

British Hussars Route 50 Italian Tanks Quickly

Spectacular Account of Battle on Desert Is Made Public

By EDWARD KENNEDY

WITH THE BRITISH DESERT FORCES IN EGYPT, Nov. 24.—(P)—Out of the silent desert case-hardened officers of a famed British Hussar regiment brought a spectacular account today of how an Italian column of fifty tanks was routed in a six-hour battle on Nov. 19.

The official communique dismissed it with a few lines, but to these desert-wise men it was the most important encounter between British and Italian forces here since the Italians pushed their advance base to Sidi Barrani last September.

The "little party"—as they put it—took place at Hilqut, fifteen miles south of Sidi Barrani in the seventy-mile wide no-man's-land between the Italian and British lines.

Tanks Are Disabled
The fight started at 8 a. m. when Italian planes dive-bombed and machine-gunned one of the Hussar patrols in the area. As such attacks usually precede Fascist land movements, the British headquarters upon hearing about it by radio immediately sent out more patrols.

"We sighted an enemy column of fifty tanks and other vehicles," recounted a Hussar officer, who now rides to battle in tanks instead of on horseback.

"We gathered full forces into the region, the Italians opening fire when they saw our movements. With heavy fire we disabled several of their tanks and sent two ammunition trucks sky high when their cargoes exploded."

"Our tanks which had closed around their rear inflicted heavy damage on the Italian light tanks because they have less armor in the back."

Tiny Slovakia Latest Power To Join Axis

First Chilly Warning Is Given Greece by Nazi Germany

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—(P)—The first chilly warning to Greece from Germany came tonight in a statement by the semi-official Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz asserting that Premier General John Metaxas, of Greece, has "made himself openly a tool of the British policy of spreading war."

The statement came shortly after Slovakia, tiny nation made up of the remnant Czechoslovakia, had signed the Axis military and economic pact and promised to rush to the aid of Germany, Italy and Japan in the event they are attacked by some outside power not already at war.

The semi-official publication declared that General Metaxas' statement that he was fighting for all the Balkans was "extraordinarily risky and dangerous."

Says Europe against England

"By such a statement," Korrespondenz said, "Metaxas has made himself openly a tool of the British policy of spreading war."

"Europe today stands against England," Korrespondenz said. "Whoever in the face of consequences wishes to stand outside of the German sphere and sacrifice the welfare of his own people should not be surprised if the changing of the order of the day brings ruin to the one at fault."

The statement by the commentary was the first notable instance where any semi-official German mouthpiece has warned Greece of the full possibilities of her refusal to capitulate before the demands of Italy, Germany's original Axis partner.

Korrespondenz quoted Metaxas as saying the Greeks were fighting not only for their own land but also for other Balkan states and for the freedom of Albania.

Since Germany herself has taken over the job of protecting the southeast peoples, this approached the nearest thus far to bring a German suggestion that the Greeks were fighting not only against Italy but against German interests in the Balkans.

Dela Tuka, 60-year-old premier of the 20-month-old republic, pledged the "blood of Slovakia's sons" to uphold the pact. His country thus became the sixth nation to join the Axis line-up. Bulgaria is expected to make a similar commitment, possibly tomorrow.

The pact was signed in the Reich's chancellery amidst the usual ceremonies. It was identical with previous documents except for substitution of the name "Slovakia."

Texas Is Hit by Ice and Floods

Five Inch Coat of Ice Cripples Communication Lines in Panhandle

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 24.—(P)—A five-inch coat of ice was thickening on communications lines in the isolated Texas Panhandle tonight while in Central East Texas vast lakes formed on thousands of acres of fertile farm lands and torrential rains continued to fall.

A Dallas official of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company received a report from a construction foreman at Amarillo via short wave radio that 12,000 poles had snapped.

Temperature 28 Degrees
The temperature was around twenty-eight degrees. Freezing mist added to the coating.

The ice-bound area extended from Amarillo twenty-five miles South and East and Northwest into New Mexico and Colorado. The company was rushing thirty-two construction crews from all parts of the state.

R. L. Rolfe, Dallas amateur radio operator, made contact late tonight with three stations at Amarillo, including one of the Amarillo News. Associated Press dispatches were sent to Rolfe for transmission to the member newspaper.

Nazis Report 300 Tons of Explosives Loosed on Britain

German High Command Says Several Hundred Planes Used in Attack

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—More than 1,200,000 pounds of bombs were dumped by Nazi fliers on the industrially-important city of Birmingham and the port of Southampton in two overnight attacks on Britain, it was reported tonight.

The German high command declared several hundred planes carried out a "rolling attack" on Birmingham and unloosed over 600,000 pounds of bombs. It asserted that the light of flares and conflagrations in that city showed easily that "numerous militarily important manufacturing facilities were destroyed."

The raid on Southampton, an important terminus of trans-Atlantic shipping before the war, was described by authorized sources, which said approximately 250 planes took part.

These sources said 600,000 pounds of explosives of all calibers and 12,000 incendiary bombs were dropped on Southampton in an overnight attack.

Other raiders were reported to have attacked London, Liverpool, Bristol and Birkenhead.

It was said the section of government buildings in London took an especial pounding.

British Soldiers Are Aiding Royal Air Force in Its Battle against Italian Army

ATHENS, Nov. 24.—(P)—The Greek Army reported today it had occupied heights dominating Argirocastro, Southwestern Albania, the only remaining big base on the frontier for the thus far luckless invasion of Greece.

The Greeks also claimed important advances in other sectors, in some places nearly twenty miles within Italian-held Albania.

By The Associated Press
ATHENS, Nov. 24.—British soldiers, forced from Europe last summer on the fall of France, have regained a continental foothold on the Greek mainland. It was disclosed tonight as Greek troops pushed on into Albania.

British warships transported an undisclosed number of soldiers across the Mediterranean without interference from Italian planes or warships. It was reported, and landed them at Greek ports some time ago. They were welcomed enthusiastically by the populace and since have been aiding the Royal Air Force in its battle against the Italians.

In the Greek-Italian fighting, a Greek spokesman said, advance units of the Greek army have reached Pogradetz, about twenty-five miles north of Koritza, the base which was captured last week from the Italians.

Occupies Maschopolis

He also confirmed reports that the Greeks have occupied Maschopolis, about eleven miles Northwest of Koritza.

Other reports said the Greeks have occupied the rocky heights above Argirocastro, main Italian base in Southern Albania, in the general drive which has carried some units nineteen miles forward.

The Italians were reported trying to reorganize their retreating forces to form a second line of defense but the exact position of the line was not known.

Royal Air Force headquarters disclosed that Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Longmore, commander of all British air forces in the Mediterranean, made a quick visit to Greece and inspected RAF squadrons.

The RAF said he expressed satisfaction at the speed and efficiency with which the units went into action and with their successes. During the visit he was received by King George II and had an interview with Premier General Metaxas and Generalissimo Papagos.

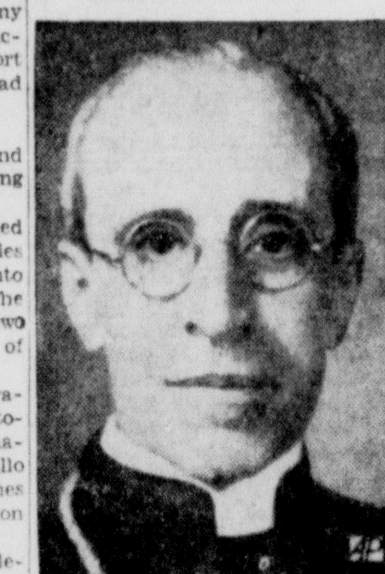

(A Reuters dispatch from Athens to London said numbers of British and New Zealand airmen landed at a Greek harbor a few days ago from warships.)

Crowds Cheer Tommies
The entire operation of landing the "Tommies" was carried out in daylight under a clear sky, it was said.

As they landed, cranes hauled equipment from the ships. Groups of people had gathered along the route. Many people (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

Greek Infantry Crack Fascist Armed Forces

Greece Plans To Throw Italian Army out of Albania

By J. WES GALLAGHER

SALONIKA, Greece, Nov. 24 (AP)—Greek infantry regiments were reported today to be cracking through the Italian mechanized forces in at least two sectors with such fierceness that the more enthusiastic Greeks believed they would soon have half of Albania in their hands.

An authoritative Greek source summing up Greek aims after a month of war offered these statements: Greece is waging an offensive war intended to throw the Italian army out of Albania.

The British and Greek fleets, blockading the Eastern end of the Mediterranean, have turned the Aegean sea into a "Greek lake" and have isolated the Greek Dodecanese islands.

The combined Greek-British Expeditionary Force awaits the zero hour in Crete when the blockade will have weakened the Dodecanese so badly that they will be able to make a swift attack.

The British and Greek fleets are being blocked at least temporarily from gaining control of the Adriatic sea by a big concentration of Italian submarines while Italy's warships keep out of the way of the British Mediterranean squadrons.

The Italians have been forced to call most of their air force into front line in an attempt to stem the Greek advance, leaving Macedonia towns and communications free from bombings for days at a time.

Greek successes are understood to be of even greater scope than was cautiously admitted officially.

Italy missed her opportunity for a successful blitzkrieg in the first days of the war because her air force failed to strike quickly enough to prevent the completion of Greek mobilization.

A staff officer summarized Greek strategy when he was asked whether a certain town had been captured.

"We are not concerned with taking this town," he replied, "or in holding that one or winning some particular objective. These things are incidental. Our job is just one thing—to deal a complete knockout blow to our enemy's army."

THREE SISTERS DIE IN KENTUCKY FIRE

SHEPHERDSVILLE, Ky., Nov. 24 (AP)—Three sisters, the oldest five, burned to death in their home here today while their mother sought frantically to rescue them from a second story room.

The mother, Mrs. Catherine Edmunds Budd, 25, said she left the children, Bessie Lee, two; Joyce Marian, three, and Martha Ann, five, to go for a pail of water on the first floor of the home.

Screams of the little girls were her first notice of danger, she said. The father, Harry Budd, was working in a nearby distillery at the time.

Irish coast in which two British steamers had been torpedoed earlier. The Swedish ship reported it was drifting due East and in need of "compass bearings and assistance."

A third vessel, which Mackay radio said identified herself by the call letters "Gleo," messaged that an "unknown vessel" had been torpedoed "eighteen miles off Inishtrahull," the Northernmost tip of Ireland.

The position given indicated an unusually daring attack within ready range of naval base patrol vessels. Most submarines have plied much farther from land.

Mackay radio also picked up a call from the 4817-ton British Freighter Trebata reporting she had sighted a "suspicious vessel" about 90 miles west of Ireland. No further word was heard from her.

In Washington, the State Department, Navy and Coast Guard said they had no information on the reported attack on the Port Hobart. South American naval circles have deduced from an ever-growing list of "overdue" ships that at least one powerful raider has been at large in the South Atlantic.

British Maintain Patrol
The British have maintained a constant patrol, now headed by Commodore F. H. Pegram and the Cruiser Enterprise, off South America and the Caribbean.

One of the patrol ships, the Auxiliary Cruiser Alcantara, traded shots last July 28 with an armed German merchantman in the vicinity of today's attack. The raider escaped.

It was believed that the German vessel, reportedly carrying four hidden guns on each broadside, was the "Narvik," one of the new Nazi 10,000-ton freighters.

Capable of nineteen knots, she is faster than most merchantmen and early in July she caught and sank the British freighters Davian and St. John several hundred miles east of the Virgin Islands.

There have been numerous stories of submarines being sighted off Central America. Other reports indicated that the Nazis have established supply bases on out-of-the-way islands throughout the seven seas.

head. The RAF charged into the enemy formation, shooting down three of their planes at the first crack. The remainder took flight. One of our planes was lost, another was forced down but the pilot was safe.

"The Hussars remained on the spot to blow up Mussolini's disabled tanks, while the Italians—from a great distance—took potshots at them.

Nine Italians Killed

"The Italians left nine dead in the desert. We took ten prisoners and suffered only two casualties."

I visited the prisoners today in a camp behind the lines. Two of them complained bitterly that their commanding officer fled, leaving them at the mercy of the British fire.

"A shell struck our truck, wounding the driver who was carried back to the Italian lines, a prisoner told me. We stayed, trying to make the truck run when another shell hit it and knocked it out for good."

"We had instructions to destroy a truck in such a case so we threw hand grenades into it. But it didn't explode. Then there was machinegun fire."

"We jumped under the truck and before we knew it it looked like all England was on us."

The soldiers are not combat forces but specialists for communications and transport and supplies. They were brought over solely to help the RAF, operating from Greek bases.

The Greek spokesman, discussing the Italian retreat, said the Fascists were showing a tendency to establish a second line of defense but it was not known "whether the (enemy) will be able to hold."

"We can only confirm the nervousness and confusion of the retreating Italians," he said. "We need not mention the material captured, which is important. I would only say we continue taking more."

He also confirmed the capture of Konispoli, on the Ionian Sea a few miles inside of Albania.

Despite rainy weather, the Greeks were reported to be attacking the Italian lines. They minimized the effect of Italian attempts to bomb Koritza and Greek advance units.

Some of the Greek forces were actively engaged assembling equipment and arms dropped by the retreating Italians.

No flood deaths were reported but at least seven persons were killed in traffic accidents during the downpour.

Hardest hit areas were around Temple and Cameron and Corsicana and Palestine with lowlands under water south of Marshall to Logansport, La.

Several cars were stalled in the Mosquero area.

The lowland areas from South of Marshall to Logansport, La., were vast lakes.

Filibuster Looms In Senate over Logan-Walter Bill

Opponents May Offer Anti-Lynching Legislation as an Amendment

By EDWIN B. HAARINSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 (AP)—Senate opponents of the Walter-Logan bill it was reported today may offer anti-lynching legislation as an amendment—a step regarded as certain to provoke a filibuster by Southern members and assure the eventual death of the measure.

The Senate is to vote tomorrow on whether to take up the bill which would prescribe uniform procedure for quasi-judicial government agencies and would expedite appeals to the courts from their decisions. The House passed the measure last June over administration opposition.

If tomorrow's vote is favorable, some senators said, an anti-lynching amendment is expected to follow. Among those who said that this action was probable was Senator Minton of Indiana, the Democratic whip and an opponent of the Walter-Logan bill.

The House twice has approved bills to make lynching a federal crime, but each time Southern senators have prevented action in the Senate by carrying on what they called "prolonged debate" and what proponents of the legislation called a "filibuster."

Senators Burke (D-Neb.), Hatch (D-NM), an Austin (R-Vt.) expressed confidence that the Senate would act favorably on the motion to begin consideration of the Walter-Logan bill.

Proponents of the bill assert it provides sorely needed reforms for semi-judicial agencies, bureaus, and departments.

Opponents, including majority leader Barkley (D-Ky.), contend the measure would hamper and restrict the work of the labor board, securities commission, social security board, and other New Deal agencies.

Barkley predicted that President Roosevelt would veto the measure, if the Senate enacted it.

The House has no pending business, and leaders doubted that the quorum of members necessary to transact business would be present. Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex.) advised members yesterday to go home, saying they would receive notice if any important business came up.

Processors and distributors, the department went on, now receive about fifty or sixty of the average dollar spent by consumers for food compared with forty or forty-eight cents between 1913 and 1920.

For an hour German batteries opposite Dover tossed shells across the sunlit channel today and Nazi planes dropped bombs at several points in Kent but failed to inflict casualties or damage, the Air Ministry asserted.

The Air Ministry announced two bombers and a Messerschmidt fighter were shot down in the day's spasmodic air fighting.

While the shelling of the Kent coast was going on a British Spitfire flew across the channel and circled over the Nazi batteries at Cap Gris Nez.

On its return the plane ran into a flight of four fleeing German raiders. In the ensuing dogfight coastal observers said one of the German craft disappeared in a steep dive. The Spitfire came home doing the "victory" barrel roll.

Aftermath of War Will Be a Terrible Thing

Famine, Disease and Death Said To Be Over-running Europe Now

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH

Associated Press Science Writer
WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—The three horsemen of the apocalypse who ride behind war—famine, disease and death—were said today to be already overrunning Europe.

In a report to Scientific monthly, official magazine of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor of Stanford university said that the aftermath of the European war may be worse than the war itself.

Throughout Europe and particularly in the countries conquered by Germany the problem of food is already becoming acute, he declared, and shortages are necessitating strict rationing of available supplies.

In Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and France, he said, there will be inadequate supplies of wheat, meat, fats and oils because those available supplies have either been commandeered or used up by the armies and farmers have not been able to work their lands.

In addition, Dr. Taylor added, "in most countries a special problem is the feeding of refugees."

On the heels of famine are bound to come thousands of cases of disease due to lack of food, neglect, poor housing, insufficient clothing and lack of fuel. Public health and other medical authorities paint a dismal picture of the coming winter for millions of Europeans of all nationalities.

Thousands of children, they say, will be born dead, thousands of mothers will die for lack of medical attention, diphtheria and pneumonia will kill other thousands, and epidemics of influenza, typhus, typhoid fever, measles and plague break out—which medical men fully expect—the toll of death and suffering will be much greater than that of the war itself.

Tiny Slovakia

Slovakians held a long conference with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and other German figures after the ceremonies.

This piece by piece Germany apparently is clearing the way for what militarily seems most likely—the bulging of war in a new sphere as the Axis powers seek to tie further knots in the already tangled affairs of the British Empire.

News of Italian retreats in Albania is published without comment in German papers as it appears in Italian communications.

Besides Greece and Bulgaria, Spain, Yugoslavia, Switzerland and Russia are the only European continental powers not yet in the Axis pact or under Germany's direct domination.

Spanish spokesmen, while not signing, have intimated they are in spirit with the Axis.

Pope Pius

country," and to fight the war as humanely as possible.

Blames Contentious Aspirations
For the text of his homily the Pope referred to Christ's answer to the Apostles as to what would be the sign of the world's end, concluding:

"You shall hear of wars and rumors of wars. See that you not be troubled. For these things must come to pass, but the end indeed is not yet come."

"We must not be troubled x x x in the preaching of the gospel," he said. "But nonetheless the present hour is a phase in the solemn story of humanity predicted by Christ."

The Pontiff blamed the "contentious aspirations" of raw materials as responsible for the war, saying oil and minerals in the earth "disturb the aims of man and upset his peace."

Today's conflict, he said, "instead of subsidizing goes on to gather new ferocity" so that the "din of war seems to overcome and drown our voice."

Prays for Peace
"Grant us, oh Lord," he prayed, "peace in our days."

"May justice and charity on one side and on the other be in perfect balance so that all injustices be repaired, the reign of right restored, all rancor and discord be banished from men's minds, and may there arrive x x x true and well-ordered peace that will permanently reunite as brothers x x x all peoples of the human race."

The Pontiff refrained from asking special protection for the Vatican, but called attention to "this altar and this cross which dominates x x x this tomb on which we reverently stand (that of St. Peter), this cornerstone of a church known and venerated in the face of nations. He coupled this statement with an appeal to his listeners to unite with him in "the divine sacrifice of appeasement."

At the Pope's orders, the usual pomp and color marking a papal ceremony in St. Peter's was dispensed with.

No Hand Clapping or Cheers
There was no handclapping or the usual cheers of "long live the Pope" for he had asked that in keeping with the solemnity of the occasion there be no such demonstrations.

For the first time since he became Pope, Pius XII walked into the Basilica, instead of using the Sedia Cestatoria (throne chair) in which Pontiffs usually are carried.

The Pope entered from his adjoining palace shortly before 11 a. m. (4 a. m. EST) and began communion. His homily, delivered in Italian, began at 11:10 a. m. (4:10 a. m. EST) and ended at 11:30.

Secret Devices To Combat Night Raids Is Being Developed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 (AP)—Secret devices to combat night bombing raids are being developed both in this country and Britain, authorities said today.

Lord Lothian, British ambassador just back from England, said his country's technical experts were hard at work on a number of "hush hush" devices for the destruction of nocturnal bombers. He added cryptically that the problem would not be solved in the next two months.

The ambassador's mention of a specific time limit was interpreted in some quarters as indicating that the question had become one of production rather than a search for the new weapon.

The army is keeping a tight-lipped silence regarding its devices for night bombing defense, but a high officer assured newsmen "we are not asleep." Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, disclosed last week that the army had observers with the Royal Air Force and it was officially explained that they have had unusual opportunities to learn what the British are doing.

Fredrick Has Parade To Honor Draftees

FREDERICK, Md., Nov. 24 (AP)—On the eve of Maryland's first draft call, Frederick staged a huge parade today dedicated to "national defense."

Acting Chief of Police Allen S. Bartgis estimated there were 3,000 persons in the line of march, with some 15,000 spectators lining city streets.

Civic fraternal and business organizations participated with marching men or floats of patriotic nature. Music blared from seventeen bands and musical organizations.

National Guardsmen from Frederick, Hagerstown, Westminster, Pikesville, and Baltimore also took part, with Mayor Lloyd C. Culler, Frederick, and Mayor Charles Dailey, Martinsburg, W. Va., heading the parade.

The parade took an hour and a half to pass a given point, Bartgis said.

Speeches and exercises scheduled after the parade were called off when state officials sent word they would not be able to accept invitations.

The parade, a substitute for an Armistice day parade postponed due to rain, was sponsored by Francis Scott Key Post, No. 11, American Legion.

Unique Co-Operation Brings Greece Success

NEW YORK, Nov. 24 (AP)—The Budapest radio in a broadcast heard here by NBC tonight said "unique cooperation" among the Greek, British and Albanian Rebel forces drove retreating Italians in Albania into positions in which ambushed Albanians could "literally massacre the surprised Italians."

The radio said the "appalling Italian losses" are largely due to that teamwork. It added that Greek-British-Albanian strategy forced the Italians to retreat in a northerly direction and into the Albanian ambushes.

The Albanians then drove the Italians into headlong and disorganized retreat, the radio said.

However, the radio said the most important factor in the Italian setback was the "unprecedented scope of assistance rendered Greece by Britain both in men and material."

KEYSER, W. Va., Nov. 24—Members of Keyser's Nancy Hanks Post, No. 3518, Veterans of Foreign Wars, this afternoon conducted dedication ceremonies for a new flag and flag-staff at the Burlington school.

F. C. Devericks, Clarksburg, state department officer, was principal speaker.

The flag and staff were purchased and presented to the school several weeks ago by the local VFW post. Formal dedication ceremonies were opened at 2:30 this afternoon, with members of the local post present in uniform. Post Commander James Deegan was in charge.

College To Get Flag

Tweta Sigma Chi fraternity flag pole and flag to Potomac State college here, according to the "Pasquillo" student newspaper.

The flagstaff, which will be topped by a six-inch ball, will be set in front of Reynolds hall on the college campus soon, according to William Keller, chairman of the committee in charge of the erection. From the pole will fly a "huge American flag," the Pasquillo said.

The metal staff was obtained as a gift, the student paper said, from Robert Gerson, a former student now of the American Iron and Metal Works, Cumberland.

NYA workers and Thetas will scrape the metal and apply a coating of aluminum paint after the sections have been welded together.

Fraternity members said the project was undertaken in response to a letter to the editor, appearing in a previous issue of the Pasquillo, inquiring as to why no flag was flown at the college.

council wished the men good luck, adding that he felt confident the six Cumberland men will show that the true American spirit exists.

Attorney General Walsh said that 3,000 miles of ocean did not assure the United States of security in these days when nations regard treaties as scraps of paper and added that the best means of security is preparedness. He spoke of army discipline and concluded his talk by saying that the backbone of every army is the doughboys.

William J. Edwards said it was a wonderful gesture on the part of Fort Cumberland post to honor the draftees and considered it a great privilege to speak on the occasion.

Tom Conlon advised the youths to have a good time while they're in camp and warned them not to try and bribe the corporal or sergeant.

Judge Bruce introduced the local administrators of the draft who were present, namely, Matthew J. Coffey, Arthur J. Weber, Harold R. Powell, DeLisle Chaney, clerk, Franklin H. Ankeney, Alvin Yaste, clerk, Michael O. Blake, P. Emmett Fahey, clerk, and Charles Z. Heskett, government appeal agent.

William M. Somerville and Puderbaugh, members of the draft advisory board, also were present. Dr. Spicer, a member of the 1917-18 draft board, also got a nice hand when introduced.

Lowndes Thanks Legion

Bruce told a number of funny stories and concluded his talk by recalling that Cumberland is rich in patriotic lore, referring to the Cresaps and others of the Revolutionary War days.

Upshur Lowndes, in behalf of the draftees, thanked the American Legion for the party and said he hoped that Cumberland "will be proud of us when we return home next year."

Sergt. Clarence Blehn, United States Army recruiting officer, George Carroll, assistant United States Navy recruiting officer, and Capt. Randolph Millholland, First Lieut. Abraham Miller, and Second Lieut. John Golden and Robert Matlick, of Company G, National Guard, also were introduced.

Newhouse Death Still Unsolved

Intensive Canvass of Piedmont Area Fails to Produce Information

Police admitted yesterday that "little progress" has been made in their investigation of the death of Lyle "Snell" Newhouse, 24, of Keyser, W. Va., a Celanese worker, whose body was found Wednesday night along the Westport-McCoolle road.

Authorities of two states, West Virginia and Maryland, have been attempting to trace Newhouse's movements in the three-hour "blank period" after he was last seen alive at 6 p. m. in Piedmont.

County Investigator Terrence J. Boyle reported that an intensive canvass of the Piedmont area has produced no information to all the meager clues in the mystery.

One theory advanced by authorities that Newhouse might have been fatally injured in a fight during a card game in Piedmont, and his body taken in an automobile to the isolated spot and dragged into the roadside ditch, near the Western Maryland Railway tracks. A blow at the base of the skull caused his death.

Another angle was that he could have been slugged and robbed while in a car, before being dumped along the road to die. His pocketbook was found a quarter-mile from the place where his body was discovered, and his right trouser pocket was turned inside out.

Luther Borror, also of Keyser, held in the county jail for investigation, told authorities he left Newhouse at 6 p. m. Wednesday in Piedmont when the latter said he intended to "get into a card game."

Borror was the last person seen with Newhouse, officers said, and efforts to trace Newhouse's movements after that time have been futile.

Funeral services for the victim were held Saturday afternoon at the home of his mother, Mrs. Edward Newhouse, 99 B street, Keyser, with the Rev. R. L. Brill, pastor of Calvary United Brethren Church officiating. Interment was in Queen's Point Cemetery.

Besides his mother, he is survived by three brothers, John, Ray and William Newhouse, at home; and four sisters, Katherine, at home; Mrs. Victor Mack, of Cleveland, O.; Mrs. Owen McGreevy and Mrs. Lawrence McDonald, of Keyser.

Grange Unveils 1941 Agricultural Program

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 24, (P)—The National Grange unveiled today a 1941 platform for agriculture—a "fighting program," its leader said—embodying recommendations for strong American defenses and "a fair share of the national income" for agriculture.

The twelve-plank platform, drafted by the executive committee after study of legislation and nearly 200 resolutions approved by delegates to the million-member farm organization's seventy-fourth annual convention, also calls for:

Continuation of "some" government benefit payments, elimination of trade treaties "harmful to agriculture," incentive payments for production of new crops needed in national defense, development of cooperative marketing and establishment of a voluntary quota system to maintain prices.

"It is a fighting program," commented National Grange Master Louis J. Taber, a member of the committee, which began its work after close of the convention Saturday.

"It is one on which all sections of the country can unite for the best interests of the nation and the advancement of agriculture."

Christmas is only a month away and the Salvation Army and the West and South Side Fire Departments are again going to make it possible for many children to have toys.

The Salvation Army is now gathering in old toys, and men at the West and South Side fire stations, are repairing and painting the larger ones, as they have done in past years.

Families who have toys which their children have discarded or ones which will be replaced this Christmas with new ones should get in touch with the Salvation Army and let them call for the old toys.

We should remember "It is more blessed to give than to receive" and by turning over old toys to the Salvation Army you can make it possible for them to gladden the hearts of youngsters at Christmas who otherwise might not have a single toy.

The Salvation Army has also received an urgent appeal for warm wearing apparel for men, women and children who are war sufferers. They also want wool blankets, quilts, etc. Brigadier Phillipson, announces that in a few days they will send two or three boxes of supplies for war relief.

The war relief quota for the Salvation Army here of $250 has been raised. Most of it came from out of town collections, part of it from the local officers and soldiers of the Salvation Army.

While writing about the Salvation Army it is interesting to note that at present fifty boys are enrolled in the youth program at the Red Shield Center in South Cumberland. In North Cumberland the Army has facilities for an enrollment of thirty-five boys.

In addition to the recreational program, the young folks have an opportunity to learn wood craft, leathercraft, Indian bead work, burnt woodwork, linoleum cutting and etc.

Air Markings Are Wanted For Our Civilian Pilots

CUMBERLAND expects to have a modern airport some of these days and, of course, when it does, those who travel over the community in planes will have a good guiding mark. Nearby also is one of the aviation beacons, which serves to guide the mail and transport air pilots.

But it appears that more markers for the convenience and safety of air pilots are needed, particularly those in civilian air service. Representative Joshua L. Johns, of Wisconsin, has had incorporated in the Congressional Record some suggestions along this line made recently by Chester G. Myers, chairman of the Safe Air Travel and member of the Pan-American Aviation committees of the Aviation Defense Association, Washington, which apply to Cumberland and other cities and towns of the country.

Myers pointed out that one of the most serious problems confronting the civilian air pilot is the constant danger of losing his way. "Private planes do not ride radio beams as do the mail and transport planes," he pointed out. "Nor are they equipped with the dozens of delicate navigating instruments found on air liners. The private pilot usually sets his course by compass and gets to his destination without trouble if he stays on his course."

"But suppose strong winds or storms force him off his course. Sometimes pilots are blown fifty to 100 miles by adverse weather conditions. What then? The civilian pilot can get out of his difficulty only by identifying his whereabouts, consulting his map and thus getting back on the course he was following before the storm."

What could and should be done about this? Myers supplied the necessary suggestions. "First and foremost," he said, "is the name of the town and the state abbreviation. Somewhere in your town there should be high white letters spelling that information, as 'York, Pa.' Painted on a large rooftop, this would readily identify that city to an aviator. Next, there should be a directional arrow pointing to the north and with the letter 'N' painted in it. And then, if your town does not have an airport, there should be another large outline arrow pointing to the nearest airport and with the name and distance painted in it, such as 'Harrisburg, 36 M.'"

"You can readily see how helpful this information would be to a pilot who had lost his way. If he had battled high winds or storms for hours and his gasoline supply was depleted, such information might very well prevent a forced landing, serious injury or death."

"The quickest and cheapest way to air mark your town is by painting the information on a factory roof, large barn roof, school, water tank, etc. The letters should be several feet high to be easily read from the sky."

"If painting is not feasible, the same information can be worked out on the broad lawn of a school, hospital, park, private estate, etc. The letters can be assembled from stone, gravel, or similar material. Full information on this subject can be secured from the Federal Government's Air Marking Bulletin No. 12."

Myers declared that this air marking is not an expensive undertaking for a community and said there should be no hesitancy about providing it when the actual cost is balanced against the possible saving of lives and the advancement of American aviation, as well as the advertising value involved.

That there is need of these markings is instanced by the fact that Representative Johns has had his remarks in the House incorporating the suggestions by Myers sent over the country. Cumberland and other communities in Allegany county and this tri-state region, as well as elsewhere, would do well to give this need some attention.

Important Work Is Facing Congress

THERE ARE still members in Congress who maintain that the body should adjourn because there is nothing left for it to do.

We heard the same argument last June, but subsequent events proved that it was entirely wrong as the Congress has had plenty to do since then, and if it had adjourned as the New Deal command desired, the country would now be in a pretty mess with regard to the national defense.

But several important and urgently needed measures are pending, to which the Congress should give its attention and on which action is impatiently desired by the people.

One of these is the needed Walter-Logan bill, on which Mark Sullivan has given attention in his recent dispatches printed on this page. This is something that would be of as great a help in promoting unity of purpose and necessary production as anything on the boards.

The other is the desired modifications of the Wagner Labor Relations act. The fact that labor strife continues and that operations have been suspended in vitally needed defense industries is sufficient proof that these modifications should be provided.

Also there is the tax revision and the need for reducing relief and other non-defense expenditures to match the increase in employment occasioned by the vast expansion in defense industries.

These are important domestic measures demanding attention. In addition there is the consideration of possible emergencies arising from the war situation.

All in all, there is no reasonable excuse for the Congress to pass up its duty at this time.

Physical Weakness as An Individual Fault

A MEDICAL MAN, Dr. Harold J. Reilly of Philadelphia, is more concerned about the physical deficiencies of the American people than about the menace of fifth columnists. "A push-over for a germ is worse than a spy," says Dr. Reilly, and he goes on to report that "even the army loses more men from sickness and disease than from guns."

The tragic circumstance about this condition, if true, is that much of an individual's physical weakness is his own fault. Many, as Dr. Reilly says, are "physical slackers." The rules of health are reasonably simple, no great hardship, and backed by the best authorities in the world. Yet most persons give them only casual respect and obedience.

So when young men are called into the country's service by a selective draft, the first problem is to make them fit for hard work and military discipline. Disease and physical weakness cost the nation far more than defensive preparations. Not only the nation as a whole but individuals pay the price.

Other peoples, especially in ancient times, considered good physical condition an honorable and admirable achievement. The modern world's straining for other objectives has set aside this desire to be fit, and free from physical weakness and suffering. But it is still profoundly true, as Isaac Walton wrote, that "health is the second blessing that we mortals are capable of: a blessing that money cannot buy."

Nature Keeps the Doctors Busy

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION has good reason to boast of its conquests in the pneumonia field. The drugs, sulfapyridine and sulfathiazole, are remarkable for their effects in treating most types of the disease, and they have reduced fatalities greatly.

But just when occasion for rejoicing is present, a hitherto unknown type of pneumonia, one caused by a virus instead of bacteria, and one against which the two new drugs are ineffective, bobs up. It was described by Dr. Warfield T. Longcope, of Johns Hopkins University, before the annual meeting of the Southern Medical Association. Previously, it was thought that pneumonia was due to one or more of the specific types of the pneumococcus bacteria. Now that theory goes to the ashcan.

Members of the medical profession have often been praised on the ground that they are forever working to put themselves out of business. Their continuous search for new remedies for diseases and their undeniable conquests in the field of preventive medicine testify to this. But they seem to have an ally in nature so far as the stability of their profession is concerned. At least, to the layman, it appears that nature is extremely bountiful in bringing new diseases into the world or in disinterring them from the past.

Judging by the state of things in this year 1940, it is safe to say that the people of the world will require the aid of the medical profession for many centuries to come, regardless of the assiduity that it shows in trying to put its members out of work.

I know that day-dreaming is a mistake, but I also know that it is pleasant.

Once upon a time I went to dancing school . . . but I refused to learn to dance.

I made a very handsome kite for some children . . . It had a big green star on it and the kids all said it looked very grand. But it wouldn't go up in the air and my stock fell.

I suspect that I deplore in others the faults that are my own. . . I say, "Don't worry." I am a worrier. . . I say, "Don't lose your temper." I lose mine. I say "Keep away from the little deaths." I die little ones daily.

Also, I praise the good qualities in others that I fondly hope are mine. (But we needn't go into that.)

A chipmunk came forward, unafraid, and took a crust of bread from my hand. . . I was secretly proud of my ability to inspire confidence in a wild animal. . . When I remarked on it, someone who knew chipmunks said it happened to be a particularly hungry or impudent chipmunk. Squeak!

I'd rather ride than walk, any day. . . You can take a "nice long hike," if you wish. I'll sit under a tree.

To my shame I confess that I used to sign my name "E. Marshall Maslin." . . And how did that way of writing one's name acquire a high-hat implication?

I've never yet wakened from sound sleep convinced that there's a burglar in the house. . . Once or twice, however, on coming home to an empty house I have looked under the bed. . . What burglar would be so silly as to hide under a bed?

Birds in England Go Underground Because of War

By EDWIN C. HILL

A friend of this writer has from her brother in London an odd bit of nature lore, a pathetic little footnote on the will to survive among all living creatures. The "buddies," merry little companionable birds in the Londoners' garden, are going underground.

Accustomed to nesting in the lower branches of trees and hedges, they are now burrowing in the earth—not exactly burrowing, their host explains, but using any opening in a loose hummock of grass, or perhaps making a nest under a board or in any ground-surface aperture which gives access.

No one seems to have observed or thought much about the effect of total war on bird and animal life. Obviously man, thereby, may yield his own overlordship of creation and, like Samson, pull down the pillars of the house of life.

Leave War Zones

The birds, it would seem, would be much more adaptable than men under the ultimate disaster. Now in the news is the story of the mass flight from gunfire of the Low Countries and Northern France to Southeastern England, which started with the battle of France and is still continuing. The migrants include the nightingale, filling the English countryside with its song of throbbing beauty. Also among the fugitives are blackbirds, thrushes, plovers, wrens, cuckoos, and many species of woodbirds. Perhaps they have not bettered their lot in England, but, at any rate, unlike captive men under the new thrall of Europe they could escape.

One thing of Keats' "Ode to the Nightingale," and Shelley's "Ode to a Skylark," and John of Gaunt's "scopred" lull, and all the noble lore of the England of great poets and bird-song—but there is only sadness in these thoughts and infinite reproach for our malfeasance in our high office of planetary ruler. With but slight relevance, and no deeper meaning—an escape, perhaps—we can turn to a happier day. It was in February 1929 that Calvin Coolidge went down to Florida to dedicate the beautiful carillon tower built by Edward Bok, the Philadelphia publisher and philanthropist.

Disappointing Nightingales

There was a great crowd of notable, an impressive ceremony, eloquent speeches on a sunny day in a sunny year when war and poverty were to be pushed back into the darkness of forgotten centuries. A few years before Mr. Bok had begun importing nightingales from England, for his beautiful wooded park where stood the great bell tower. To his great disappointment none of them sang a note. He brought in singing birds of all kinds to get them in the mood. His woods were full of bird-song, but never a peep from the nightingales. They seemed happy and healthy, but they had given up singing.

The dedication ceremonies came to their climax, with the audience rising as the great bells of the tower boomed out "America." As the notes died away, there arose everywhere in the woods the exquisitely beautiful song of the nightingale, now high and shrill, now deep with a throbbing ecstasy. The explanation was simple. The English nightingale had thought the bells were playing "God Save the King."

Our Own Brand

Please do not write in for affidavits. I do not even remember who told me this story. But somehow the world as it is makes me want to turn to our own brand of bird lore. We're still on good terms with the birds over here. If you eavesdrop on the commuters in these days of higher visibility in the woods you'll hear more and more

Walter-Logan Measure Is Expected To Get Consideration by the Senate

By MARK SULLIVAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 — There was a senator from Kentucky, his name was Logan, he did about a year ago. He had exceptional respect. Without pretension to brilliancy, he was earnest and painstaking; he had been chief justice of the highest court of his state. As a Democrat, with a bent to follow party leadership, and as a liberal, he was a strong supporter of Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal. Associates in the Senate, speaking of his record from memory, could not recall any New Deal measure he had opposed. When the attempt to change the supreme court was seen to be impossible, Senator Logan was one of those who tried to salvage the president's measure by a compromise. To Senator Logan, the New Deal was party doctrine, and also liberalism.

In late 1937, however, there came to Senator Logan's attention, from constituents in Kentucky, examples of extreme and arbitrary power exercised by some New Deal agencies. Upon study, Senator Logan felt that the delegation of power, by Congress, to administrative agencies, had gone too far; he came to the shocked conclusion that some of the most precious principles of government were threatened. In this conviction, Senator Logan drafted and introduced what became known as the Logan bill.

About the purpose and effect of the Logan bill, there has been much debate, due to many variations through which the bill has gone. The original and central purpose, as it lay in the mind of its author, was, in his own words:

" . . . To stem and, if possible, to reverse the drift . . . which, if it should succeed in any substantial degree in this country, could result in totalitarianism, with complete destruction of the division of governmental power between the federal and state governments; and with the entire subordination of both the legislative and judicial branches of the federal government to the executive branch wherein are included the administrative agencies. . . ."

Hearings on Senator Logan's bill were held April to June 1938. But no action was taken in that Congress. In the next Congress, Senator Logan reintroduced his bill January 24, 1939. Soon after, in the House a companion bill was introduced by Democratic Representative Francis Walter, of Pennsylvania. Thereafter the measure was known as the Walter-Logan bill.

Normal Course in House

In the House, the course of the Walter-Logan bill was normal. It went to the Judiciary committee, was given prolonged hearings, was favorably reported and, eleven months after introduction, was passed by the House with a majority so extraordinary as to lead to comment about its significance. The vote was 282 to 97. The majority favoring the bill was made up of 130 Democrats and 149 Republicans (with three third-party votes).

Not merely did the size of the House majority—practically three to one—attract attention. It was observed that more than half the Democrats voted for the bill, 130 to

93. This ought not to have attracted attention, since it was a Democratic bill—both its sponsors, Logan in the Senate, Walter in the House, were Democrats. But, while the bill was Democratic, it was opposed by the administration. The opposition in the House, ninety-seven votes, was a pro-administration, New Deal minority—amounting to only about one-fourth of those voting.

Passage of the bill in the House concluded action there. It was done seven months ago, April 18 last. From that day, the bill has awaited action by the Senate. It still waits.

No Dissenting Voice

In the Senate, the bill started to move more rapidly than in the House — and with an apparently even greater majority favoring it. It was reported favorably by the Senate Judiciary committee, by a vote of 16 to 2. It first came up in the Senate a year and a half ago, in July, 1939. It passed without a roll-call, without a dissenting voice.

A few days later, Democratic Senate Leader Barkley asked that the action be reconsidered, and the bill be put back on the calendar. The request, in the circumstances, was not unreasonable. Friends of the bill, however, especially its author, Senator Logan, asked for assurance that the bill, if put back on the calendar, would be brought up again with reasonable promptness. This assurance Senator Barkley gave. He said, August 1, 1939:

"It is entirely satisfactory to my colleague (Senator Logan) that the vote by which that bill passed should be reconsidered . . . with the understanding that the measure be taken up at some date early in the next session."

Postponed Repeatedly

That was a year and five months ago. "Early in the next session" should have been last January and February. But the bill was not taken up, last January, nor February—nor since. Efforts to bring it up were met with requests for postponement by Senator Barkley. He made various pleas—that other bills were more important, that defense measures were pressing, that a commission to study the subject of the bill had been set up by the attorney general on request of the president.

At last Senator Barkley said he would not try to prevent the bill being brought up when the Senate resumed after the election. That means now, two years and nine months after the first introduction of the bill.

On Friday, November 22, the Senate had a quorum. Next Monday effort will be made to begin consideration of the bill. The effort is expected to succeed.

Inflation Must Be Watched

From the Altoona, Pa., Tribune

Despite the huge expenditures for the national defense program, inflation does not seem a lively or imminent threat to government economists.

The danger of inflation arises, according to students of the subject, only when production is close to capacity and full employment is about realized. Wage boosts under such circumstances are likely to set prices spiraling. Experienced observers are looking for inflation signs in the fields where a skilled labor shortage is developing. During the World War, this shortage dislocated national economy.

A difficult part of democracy's economic structure, inflation must be watched closely.

Fortunately, commodity prices are being kept in line so far. Industry has displayed a remarkable degree of cooperation. Whether cooperation because of the threat of government regulation or because of convictions that their own interests best can be served by maintaining an orderly price structure, industrialists are exercising keen judgment thus far.

Similar cooperation from the workers may be more difficult. Recognition of increased rights they have obtained under the advance of labor and labor legislation may lead them to adopting strong attitudes which eventually may harm more than themselves.

That is why peace in labor ranks is more desired than ever. Once differences are composed between the various labor organizations, labor as a group can be counted upon to cooperate to the fullest extent in national economy. Inflationary measures then will not get out of line.

However that may be, this country doesn't need to worry, about Dr. Dykstra's administration. It is as near perfection as any such effort could be.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Draft Plans Will Restore the Jobs, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 — Dr. Dykstra, administrator of selective service, is alert to one of the greatest mistakes of the World War draft. That had to do with the demobilization or drafted men rather than with their selection. The present organization of local and appeal boards for selection follows faithfully that earlier model which worked beautifully in selection.

In 1918, the selective service system planned to use exactly the same machinery for returning the boys to civil life. They were to be sent back to the boards that had taken them. There, as in their taking, they were to be clothed, housed, fed and receive their army pay until, with the assistance of local boards, they were reemployed.

Backbone Withdrawn

The powers that were said: "No!" They wanted "liquidate" the war—instantly. The whole backbone of war regulations was withdrawn suddenly. That left a structure of artificially high prices and industry paralyzed by quick cancellation of billions of war contracts. Our business system went into a coma. Into these economic doldrums, the selected men were kicked—given "travel money" home and there abandoned.

It created bitter resentment. The boys found that, while they had been away, somebody else had gotten their jobs, made much more money than they had and, in some cases, married their best girls—and they couldn't get work. Their government had taken them with glittering promises. They came home to find that Mr. Whiskers was only a step-uncle. It was a dumb-bell blunder. . . .

Will Be Improved

Dr. Dykstra says it will not be repeated and that the discarded 1918 plan for reabsorption of drafted men into industry through local boards and otherwise will be adopted and improved upon. The present law requires that these boys be given back their jobs unless the employer can make an ironclad case for not doing it.

The major complaint about this draft is that it is moving too slowly. The same sort of criticism in 1917 forced the War department into an almost fatal blunder, to order men to camps before they were ready to receive them. Let's not again be bums-rushed into that tragic error.

It's a lot better to take whatever criticism there may be for not having proper housing, clothing and food and to tell our people the exact truth, than to try to cover it up at the expense of the health and welfare of these kids. It can't be covered long. Sickness and suffering and even deaths will make a lot of noise and public resentment than any delay in preparation.

No Press Ganging

Another minor criticism is that the Army won't accept convicted felons from the draft boards, that they deserve another chance. That sounds all right, but this new army is of the highest moral tone. Mothers of these boys wouldn't feel war without the army's rule. It would be some hardships, but its repeal would work more. Conscription fell into such disrepute in England that it has never quite recovered because the "press gangs" did take, apparently in preference, the scum of the earth. We can't do that. The French solution might cover the problem put them into an exclusive corps d'elite.

However that may be, this country doesn't need to worry, about Dr. Dykstra's administration. It is as near perfection as any such effort could be.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

A difficult part of democracy's economic structure, inflation must be watched closely.

Fortunately, commodity prices are being kept in line so far. Industry has displayed a remarkable degree of cooperation. Whether cooperation because of the threat of government regulation or because of convictions that their own interests best can be served by maintaining an orderly price structure, industrialists are exercising keen judgment thus far.

Similar cooperation from the workers may be more difficult. Recognition of increased rights they have obtained under the advance of labor and labor legislation may lead them to adopting strong attitudes which eventually may harm more than themselves.

That is why peace in labor ranks is more desired than ever. Once differences are composed between the various labor organizations, labor as a group can be counted upon to cooperate to the fullest extent in national economy. Inflationary measures then will not get out of line.

Stolen Truck Demolished in Crash; Driver Unhurt, but Lands in Jail

ROMNEY, W. Va., Nov. 24.—Frank Davidson was lucky to be alive today—although his luck didn't keep him from landing in the Hampshire county jail here.

Davidson, who escaped with minor injuries when the truck he was driving plunged down an embankment near Springfield last night, will face grand larceny charges, State Police said.

The truck he was driving, which was demolished in the crash, was not his, they said. He had stolen it near here from Harry Parsons, the officers charged.

The careening vehicle, a light coal truck, plunged through a fence, knocking down several fence-poles, and overturned, perhaps several times, before coming to rest in a field. It was a total wreck, but Davidson climbed out and ran. Witnesses told police, who picked him up shortly afterwards on the Valley road between Springfield and Green Spring.

State troopers were assisted in the investigation by Romney's new police chief, Robert Rowan, of Randolph county. Rowan, who formerly took office today, succeeds Virgil Hanlin, who has gone to Charleston to become a company policeman at the du Pont plant.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

THE "GRAND COUP"

NO PLAY has a fancier name than the "grand coup." It is always a pretty thing, whenever executed, but is not nearly so difficult as some of the elaborate squeezes and lead-throwing end-plays. The times when it is absolutely necessary are sometimes quite easy to recognize, and the player who understands the mechanics of it can hardly fail then to employ it properly.

The "grand coup" is simply one form of "trump coup." The latter is used in a situation which shows one defender holding a trump honor with so many guards that the declarer cannot finesse through it often enough to catch it. If he plays normally, he will wind up being obliged to lead from his tenace to the opponent thereby giving the latter a trump trick. But if he shortens his trump holding by apparently unnecessary ruffing, the lead may be in the dummy on the crucial trick, so that the defender has to play before the declarer. If the cards ruff in this process were normal winners, the play is called a "grand coup."

A double "grand coup" was absolutely necessary on this deal to make the 4-Spade contract by South, both opponents having bid hearts and East having doubled. When the declarer has to shorten time the program included piano solos by Doro Mae Apsey and Winifred McCloskey.

Final arrangements have been made for a skating party to be held November 28 at Crystal Park by the Merit Veterans Unit of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade. Tickets may be secured from any member of the organization.

his trumps with three ruffs or winners, which is extremely rare the play is called a triple "grand coup."

Here West took two high hearts. East wanted to make dummy ruff, to protect his own trump holding, so gave a high-low signal. After dummy trumped the third heart, declarer finessed the spade J, dropping the 10 and marking the need of a double grand coup. Natural play would end with his leading trumps to East for the setting trick. He had to pare his own trumps to the same number as East, requiring two ruffs.

First he led his diamond Q, overplayed by the K, to East's A. The latter returned his diamond 9. Though the dummy could win this, South trumped with his 4. He led to the club J, then ruffed the diamond J with the 5. Next he led to the club K, cashed the club A and led the diamond 10. East now had only his three trumps, so the spade A, K and 9 took the finishing tricks.

Christmas Seal Sales Are Helping To Win Fight on Tuberculosis

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Once more the Christmas seals of the National Tuberculosis Association go on sale this week. Every year they come to remind us that we are winning the battle against this old enemy of mankind, but that it takes continuous and unremitting effort. Every year the money from these stamps goes to help finance the efforts of the local branches of the National Association in their many activities; surveys of the community in order to catch incipient cases of tuberculosis; open air schools in order to strengthen the resistance of children susceptible to tuberculosis and prevent its development; the care of those who have the disease developed, and the protection of those who may be exposed to the contagion.

Disease's Role in History

Tuberculosis has played an important part in history. Famous people who have had tuberculosis include:

In literature, Schiller, Keats, Byron, Thoreau, Bronte, Moilere and Robert Louis Stevenson.

In music, Chopin, Paganini and Mozart.

In art, Raphael.

In philosophy, Voltaire, St. Francis of Assisi and John Calvin.

Statesmen, Cicero, Cecil Rhodes, Sailors, Lord Nelson and John Paul Jones.

In science, Descartes, Priestley and Luther Burbank.

In medicine, Laennec, Ehrlich, Benjamin Rush and Trudeau.

Some medical philosophers speak of a tuberculosis temperament. They believe that the toxins of the germ stimulate certain kinds of personality in order to make them produce their best work. Perhaps such men as Keats and Stevenson would not have been so inspired had it not been for the tubercle bacillus. Others deny any typical temperamental results from this combination.

Certainly most humans who harbor the tubercle bacillus do not rise to any such heights as those of Raphael or Chopin. No, we can afford to take the risk of not having the geniuses in order to bend our efforts towards getting the better of this disease.

Modern Views of Tuberculosis

In some of my articles during the coming two or three weeks, I shall take occasion to discuss the modern view of tuberculosis as held by the most alert workers in the field today and what their plan of campaign is. We are vitally interested in this subject on account of the men going into the new army.

We wish to be sure we have no tuberculosis patients among them. I shall discuss also the work on the prevention of tuberculosis in schools and the modern methods of treatment and detection of cases in the general civil adult population. Leaving the problem of the soldier out, the two main attacks of the National Tuberculosis Association nowadays are in the treatment of school children in an attempt to stop the disease before it gets a head start and, second, to remove open cases of adult tuberculosis in the civil population so that they do not infect others and can have proper care.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

FRAN LE MAZE did not return to New York that summer. It was October when Kit went out to bring her back.

She was bound for the train that was to return her to New York when a taxi collision sent her to the hospital with a broken ankle.

There were flowers and books and other gifts that arrived by telegram and post. But it was the letters from Vance and Kit, unfolding a story of work and courage and accomplishment, that lessened the pain and fed her hope.

Vance's July letter began the story. He wrote, in part:

"I'm the guy who should be getting sympathy. Trying to run my own career and play Simon Legree to Kit will have me in a sanitarium any day. But, you'll be pleased to know, I'm making strides in the right direction. We gave Heller the bum's rush and Armendi, about whom I have already written you, is undoing Heller's mistakes rapidly.

"My end of the show is getting engagements for her under the other name (Mary Moore), which she uses in her double life. She tells me that she is writing you about these engagements so I'll spare you the details.

"Armendi is a fabulous guy, but he's sound. He isn't easy to put on paper."

Armendi! Armendi and his dramatics! Armendi was an artist, needing an artist to depict him. His dramatics were subjects for bold strokes. The coarse red handkerchief with which he wiped his great brow. The black curls clutched with frenzied fingers. The black eyes that rolled with agony when a high note splintered, that glowed with warmth when a sweet, round note fell upon his ear.

His were eyes that saw below the surface of things, wise eyes that probed and searched the face of Kit O'Reilly the day that Vance brought her to him. There were things in the sensitive nostrils, the eager eyes, the pliant mouth of the girl that he had wanted to find there. Sleeping things she did not know herself.

Four Michigan Men on All-Star of Big Ten

Northwestern Has Three Linemen on Mythical Eleven

Harmon Is Standout with George Franck for Half-back Jobs

Michigan Ace's Blocker, Evashevski Joins Him on First Team

By EARL HILLIGAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 24 (AP)—For a third straight year, Michigan's "two man gang" of Forest Evashevski and Tom Harmon had been placed on the Western Conference All-Star football team selected annually by conference coaches for the Associated Press.

The 1940 mythical eleven, made up of stars from five members of the Big Nine, also listed two other Michigan luminaries. Northwestern got three places, two went to the championship Minnesota Gophers and Purdue and Wisconsin drew one position each.

Ed Frutig of Michigan and Dave Rankin of Purdue were standout choices of the coaches as the first team ends. Frutig clinched his all-star selection with a singularly great performance against Minnesota.

Three Wildcats on Line

The tackle positions went to Urban Odson, Minnesota junior and 235 pound "giant" of the mythical eleven, and Alfred Bauman of Northwestern, also a second-year man. Bauman was a clear choice, with Odson edging out Michigan's Al Wistert.

Joe Lokane of Northwestern had little trouble winning nomination as one of the guards. The other guard post went to Michigan's Ralph Fritz after a neck-and-neck fight with Bill Kuusisto of Minnesota.

Paul Hiemenz of Northwestern was placed at center by a wide margin, the coaches being agreed he was the ace pivot man of the conference. It was the first time in several seasons that one school placed three linemen on the team.

Closest Battle

The closest battle of the poll, in which the coaches each named two teams, centered around the quarterback job. It finally went to Evashevski by a two-point margin over Ohio State's Don Scott.

The Michigan marvel, Harmon, and Minnesota's brilliant George Franck, were standouts as the half-back choices. Harmon, All-American back last season, polled 16 out of a possible 18 points for one of the half-back jobs, with coaches giving Franck 13 points for the other half-back spot.

But Franck, in addition, received first team votes both for quarterback and fullback, his 17 points total being the biggest given any member of the team.

Fastest Backfield

George Paskvan of Wisconsin was placed at fullback on his consistent work through a season marked by several fine fullbacks. Paskvan finally won out after a spirited battle with Iowa's Bill Green and Michigan's stocky line runner, Bob Westfall. Paskvan, incidentally, won the honor in 1939, the other two "repeaters" on the squad being Harmon and Evashevski.

Evashevski, Harmon, Franck and Paskvan make this backfield one of the biggest—and fastest—backfields ever named to the Associated Press team.

Players listed as receiving honorable mention were those who received at least one vote from the coaches for either of the two elevens.

M. C. A. In other matches, K. of P. registered a sweep victory over Junior Order at the "Y" and DeMolay scored a triple win over P. O. S. of A. at the Diamond. But Franck, in addition, received first team votes both for quarterback and fullback, his 17 points total being the biggest given any member of the team.

George Paskvan of Wisconsin was placed at fullback on his consistent work through a season marked by several fine fullbacks. Paskvan finally won out after a spirited battle with Iowa's Bill Green and Michigan's stocky line runner, Bob Westfall. Paskvan, incidentally, won the honor in 1939, the other two "repeaters" on the squad being Harmon and Evashevski.

Evashevski, Harmon, Franck and Paskvan make this backfield one of the biggest—and fastest—backfields ever named to the Associated Press team.

Players listed as receiving honorable mention were those who received at least one vote from the coaches for either of the two elevens.

Harold Hipsley and Bill Cavanaugh Lead Grid Scoring

Fort Hill and LaSalle Ace Backs Each Tally 31 Points

Harold Hipsley, Port Hill High halfback, and Bill Cavanaugh, LaSalle High fullback, each crossed opponents' goals five times and tallied one extra point to share 1940 city scholastic individual scoring honors with 31 points.

With tougher schedules, the past season brought a new low in scoring with the 31 points which won the individual race the lowest figure in recent years. According to records, which go back to 1932, the 33 markers which gave Deri Keller of Penn Avenue the championship in 1934 was the previous low.

Billy Dean, Port Hill's placement specialist, tallied two touchdowns and eight points after touchdowns to nose out Bill "Lefty" Smith of LaSalle for third place. Dean, who also booted the field goal which gave the Sentinels a 3-0 decision over East Fairmont, accounted for 23 points while Smith, with three touchdowns and two conversions, followed with 20 markers.

Pete Berryman Fifth

Although Hipsley and Cavanaugh tied for top honors, Hipsley played in two less games than the LaSalle ace. Hipsley took part in eight of Fort Hill's nine contests, Cavanaugh and Smith in all ten of LaSalle's battles and Dean in all of the Sentinels' engagements.

Pete Berryman, Port Hill halfback, finished fifth with 19 points while Eddie Robinette, Allegheny's No. 1 scorer, tied for sixth with Gene Hook and Jack Carnell, two Fort Hill gridgers, with 18 apiece.

Vernon Miller, Campobello end, registered two touchdowns, a field goal and an extra point to take ninth with 16 markers while Bill Chandler, Allegheny back, was tenth with 13. Bill Yoder, Allegheny fullback, and "Lefty" Hare of Fort Hill tied for eleventh with a dozen points each. Nine other boys scored a touchdown apiece.

LaSalle's scoring was the most widely distributed with a dozen players making one or more points. Port Hill placed eight on the list and Allegheny only six.

For the past four years, Allegheny stars have won the title. Jim Gaffney captured the crown last year with 88 points and also in 1936 with 109. In 1937, it was Ray Skidmore with 57 while in 1936, Frank Jordano topped the list with 97.

Keller Holds Record

The greatest number of points amassed by an individual since 1932 was Deri Keller's 114 for Penn in 1935, a year after he finished at the top with 33. In 1933, Mel Henry of Penn led with 93 while in 1932, Herman Koegel of Allegheny was first with 53.

Dean, third this season, had more points last fall than this year's winners—42 "Penny" Shaffer, LaSalle's quarterback who made but one marker, tied for sixth with 19 a year ago while John Small, Explorer end who tied for seventh in 1939 with 18 points, made one touchdown during the campaign just closed. Cavanaugh and Hipsley improved on 1939 records.

Cavanaugh accounted for only two points a year ago while Hipsley failed to score.

Port Hill, which won the city and Cumberland Valley Athletic League championships after watching Allegheny walk off with both titles in 1938 and 1939, won seven games, tied one and lost one for the best record in the city. LaSalle copped six tussles, lost one and tied three for its best record in recent years while Allegheny captured three of ten skirmishes.

The Sentinels registered 133 points in their nine games for the best offensive record while LaSalle turned in the best defensive performance in allowing ten rivals only 34 markers. Fort Hill yielded 67 points, LaSalle amassed 93 points and Allegheny made 67 points to 125 for teams played.

These figures are vastly different from those of a year ago when Allegheny, in winning eight of ten contests, gathered 202 points to its foes' 39 and Port Hill, with a similar record, crossed its foes' goals for 205 tallies while yielding 93. The 1939 Explorer eleven scored 73 points to its rivals' 148 in winning two of nine.

Statistics for the season bear out Port Hill's offensive strength and LaSalle's defensive record. The Sentinels led in first downs with 95 to LaSalle's 91 and Allegheny's 74, and paced in yards by rushing with 1,623 to LaSalle's 1,443 and Allegheny's 1,202. However, LaSalle's yardage against Altoona Catholic wasn't available and isn't included in the above figure.

AHS Leads In Pass Yardage
LaSalle's foes made 62 first downs, Port Hill's rivals 64 and Allegheny's opponents 73. Yardage gained by rushing by opposing clubs was 1,033 against LaSalle not including Altoona, 1,240 against Port Hill and 1,432 against Allegheny.

Allegheny, with the poorest record of the three, led in yards on passes with 436 for 40 completions in 114 tries. Port Hill, with figures for the Martinsburg game missing, completed 32 of 73 for 411 yards while LaSalle connected 23 of 77 for 374 yards. From the air, rivals gained 461 yards against Allegheny, 264 against LaSalle and 409 against Port Hill. Individual and team scores:

Local Draftees Given Reception At Legion Home

Six Young Men Presented Fountain Pens by Forty and Eight Society

Six young men, the vanguard of Cumberland's first draft quota, scheduled to report today in Baltimore for induction into the nation's expanding armed forces, were given a rousing sendoff last night at a luncheon celebration sponsored by Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion, at the Legion home.

The guests of honor on the occasion were August Leonard Wells, James Luther Newlin, William Lee Short, Earl William Simms, Upshur Lowndes and Thomas Daniel Birmingham.

Draftees Receive Pens

Frederick A. Puderbaugh, past commander of Fort Cumberland Post, acting as master of ceremonies, presented each of the draftees with a fountain pen on behalf of the Forty and Eight Society, fun-making branch of the American Legion.

In presenting the pens, Puderbaugh called attention to the fact that while the Forty and Eight Society membership comprises fun-makers they always think of the serious side. He added that a soldier usually forgets to write home and the minutes were given to the draftees so that they'd remember to write the folks at home after they arrived in camp.

The two-hour program was punctuated by talks by Claude L. Deal, post commander; William C. Walsh, attorney general; Mayor Harry Irvine; William J. Edwards and Thomas F. Conlon, city commissioners, and Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr.

Band Entertains

As an added feature the American Legion band under the direction of Joseph M. Pradiska played patriotic airs and William E. Capaldi, a member of Fort Cumberland Post, sang "I Am an American."

In wishing the draftees the best of luck, Toastmaster Puderbaugh told the men that the most important phrase they'll use in army life is "Yes, sir" or "No, sir" and the less they use the word "Why" the better they'll like army life.

Mayor Irvine, in bidding adieu to the draftees, spoke of the fast moving events throughout the world today and in behalf of the city (Continued on Page 3, Col. 1)

Large Crowds Attend Revival Services Held By Dr. Paul H. Packard

"There has to be a cleansing of the Temple and church leaders must again sanctify their own life before this Nation can ever again experience a revival of Christian Faith," declared Dr. Paul H. Packard, Kentucky evangelist in speaking yesterday morning at the First Church of Christ on Bedford street on the Revival under Ezekiel as prophetic of changes needed in present day religious life.

All services throughout the day at this series of revival meetings were largely attended and increased interest was shown in each service.

Dr. Packard will speak each night this week at 7:30 and each afternoon from Tuesday to Friday at 2 o'clock. The afternoon services are being featured with a series of messages on "The Return of our Lord." ATTORNEY DIES—Finley C. Hendrickson, 77, prominent attorney, sportsman and Bible class teacher, died Saturday at his home on Cumberland street, following a lingering illness. He was admitted to the bar in 1895 and aside from his legal practice he devoted much of his attention to public affairs. For many years he was an active leader in the Prohibition party.

F. C. Hendrickson, Local Barrister, Is Taken by Death

Farmer, Fisherman and Bible Class Teacher Dies at Age of 77

Finley C. Hendrickson, 77, prominent Cumberland attorney, died Saturday at 11 p. m., at his home, 325 Cumberland street, following a lingering illness.

His wife, Mrs. Edith Hamilton Hendrickson, died less than two months ago.

Mr. Hendrickson was born Oct. 22, 1863, at Hazen, Pa., just across the Mason and Dixon line. He was a son of the late Oliver P. and Sarah A. Polk Hendrickson and a grandson of Jonathan Hendrickson, who settled in this section over 100 years ago.

Admitted to Bar in 1895

He received his early education in country schools and worked on a farm. He studied law under the late Judge A. Hunter Boyd for two years and was admitted to the bar in 1895. A year after being admitted to practice he was named court stenographer, a position he held for thirteen years.

Aside from his legal practice, Mr. Hendrickson devoted much of his attention to public affairs and was one of the leaders in the movement to improve Cumberland's water supply, helping to secure options for the land where Lake Gordon is located. He was president of the Everts Creek Water Company.

For many years he was one of the most active leaders in the Prohibition party, being a national committee man and a delegate to several conventions. In 1916 he was mentioned prominently as the party's candidate for president. He took a special interest in the U. S. Constitution and was regarded as Cumberland's leading student of that important document.

Being an authority on "rainbow trout," Mr. Hendrickson's fishing trips took him all over the eastern part of the United States. About 1928 he was elected president of the old Allegany County Fish and Game Protective Association. He was greatly interested in conservation.

Taught Class 26 Years

Mr. Hendrickson was a past president of the Duke Memorial Bible Class and was its teacher for nearly twenty-six years. He was a charter member of the Kiwanis club and a past lieutenant governor of the Capitol District.

One of his last appearances was last winter before the Allegany County Historical Society when he spoke at length on "Old Homes" in Allegany county. He also spoke at a meeting sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews at the Fort Cumberland hotel, within the past year.

A daughter, Mrs. Herbert Platt of Cumberland, is the only immediate survivor.

LaVale Fire Company Auxiliary To Present All-Ladies' Minsirel

The Ladies' auxiliary of the LaVale Volunteer Fire company is rehearsing for a real streamlined all-ladies' minsirel show, December 10 and 11.

The show is chuck full of laughs and new songs and promises to be one of the best home talent affairs seen in this section for some time. There will be thirty in the cast which necessitates the building of ten more feet of stage to accommodate the entire first part.

Mrs. C. G. Ort has been contemplating this novel idea for some time and is pleased with the fact of it becoming a reality. Mrs. W. German, president of the auxiliary, is assisting Mrs. Ort as wardrobe mistress. Costumes will be made of red and blue Celerese satin, trimmed in white.

The entire show is under the personal supervision of J. Millard Hughes, of Woodlawn, LaVale, who assisted in presenting two previous shows in the community.

Elder Street Man Injured in Fall Into Subway

Walter Reckley, 26, Cripple, Hurt in 8-Ft. Plunge on Virginia Avenue

A crippled man who gave his name as Walter Reckley, 26, of 107 Elder street, was admitted to Memorial hospital early yesterday morning after he apparently fell about eight feet from the sidewalk leading into the subway on Virginia avenue.

Reckley was bleeding profusely about the ears, nose and mouth when admitted to the hospital in a semi-conscious condition. An examination showed that he suffered body bruises and a sprained right ankle in the fall.

Officer Robert V. Chisholm, who investigated, reported he saw three men stop to pick Reckley up after he fell from the walk to the street. They were Joseph Burns, 802 Brookfield avenue; Lloyd Hartsock and Robert Logsdon, both of Hyndman, Pa.

All accompanied Reckley to the hospital.

Police said the lights in the subway were out and that the sidewalk was slippery from rain when the accident occurred about 2:30 a. m. Reckley was using crutches, they said.

Hospital attendants reported his condition as "good" last night.

Traffic Survey Advocated Here

Subject Is Discussed by Four Local Speakers on Radio Program

A survey of the Cumberland traffic situation by a competent, outside authority last night was advocated by a quartet of speakers who appeared on the weekly radio program sponsored by the Club of Human Relations.

In discussing the subject, "What Can Be Done about the Cumberland Traffic Problem," the speakers agreed that a survey should be made before any action is taken.

Speakers were Charles A. Piper, chairman of the traffic committee of the Chamber of Commerce; George McAlpine Young, of the Junior Association of Commerce; Leo H. Lev, Jr., and J. E. Wetzel, Jr., moderator.

Arthur Mosier, director of the program, read two of the many letters received in regard to the program, and commented on them. The number of questions received continue to grow each week, club officials said.

Next Sunday's subject will be "What Can We Do for Humanity?" with James W. Bishop, Mrs. Thomas Brown, Arch M. Hutcheson and Harvey Weiss, moderator.

Local Man To Attend Defense Day Program At Emerson Hotel

Attorney General William C. Walsh, Henry W. Price and John D. Liebau and possibly several other local men will attend the Maryland Defense Day program tomorrow at the Emerson hotel in Baltimore.

The Cumberland delegation is planning to attend a luncheon meeting at which Major General H. H. Arnold, deputy chief of staff of the army air corps, will speak on "Air Defense."

In the forenoon, Attorney General Walsh will make a report to the legislative committee of the Maryland State Council of Defense on what was done at a recent meeting in Washington, D. C., of attorneys general and law enforcement agencies. The purpose of the meeting was to see what could be done about coordinating legislation in regard to punishments for acts of sabotage, regulating the use of firearms and explosives, organization of state guards, interstate protection of public property and other enactments deemed necessary for national defense.

The attorney general was one of a committee of five to draft model laws on national defense.

Tomorrow night, Mr. Walsh will attend a banquet of the Montgomery county bar association at Olney Inn, near Washington, D. C.

The defense day program is sponsored by the Baltimore Association of Commerce and the Maryland Council of Defense and Resources.

Two Local Clairvoyants Are Cited for Hearing

Two Virginia avenue women were arrested Saturday afternoon on a charge of violating City Ordinance 1361, Section 21, which includes conducting a business of clairvoyant, palmist, fortune telling and others.

The women, Elizabeth and Lena Wanco, were released on their own recognizance, pending a hearing to-day in police court.

Police said the pair had permits to tell fortunes, but accused them of failing to sell a pamphlet before telling each fortune. The law provides that a fortune teller must first sell a pamphlet to the "customer" and then tell the fortune free of charge, they said.

Guiseppi Amato, 703 Virginia avenue, preferred the charge and Officer L. E. Daniels made the arrests.

Fifteen Traffic Fatalities Top 1939 Death Toll in This County

13 Died in Accidents Last Year; Five Persons Killed This Month

The number of traffic fatalities this year in Allegany county has already topped the 1939 total of thirteen with over a month remaining in the present year.

The number of deaths now totals fifteen, two more than for the entire twelve-month period in 1939.

Until November it appeared that the 1940 record might show an improvement over that of 1939 but five traffic deaths so far this month increased the total to fifteen and thereby shot ahead of the 1939 record.

A report on traffic fatalities throughout the State of Maryland for the month of October shows that the number of traffic deaths exceeded those in the same month last year by fourteen. Thirty-nine Maryland citizens died on the highways last October compared to fifty-three this year.

October, November and December are considered the three months of the year that show the greatest number of fatalities. Last year's totals for the windup of the year was as follows: October, 39 deaths; November, 41; and December, 45.

While there was only one traffic death in Allegany county in October the record so far this November has surpassed any other month so far this year.

The total number of traffic fatalities in the state from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31, 1940, is 402. A total of 8,225 persons have been injured in traffic accidents in Maryland this year.

Mrs. Margaret Bradley, of near Westernport, Saturday filed a $20,000 damage suit against the Cumberland and Westernport Transit Company in circuit court charging that negligence by a bus company caused her "great mental and physical anguish."

According to the petition docketed by Attorneys Edward J. Ryan and I. Duke Avnet, Mrs. Bradley boarded a bus last April near her home, one mile from Westernport, and the driver started the vehicle before she was seated throwing her against the seats.

Arriving in Westernport, the driver stopped the bus several feet from the curb. Mrs. Bradley charges. When she alighted, believing the bus was against the curb, she lost her footing and fell to the street suffering painful injuries and shock, she claims.

Martha L. Peskin has filed a petition for a circuit court order against Lorraine, Carrie and Harold Eisenberg, trustees under the will of the late Samuel Eisenberg, to receive reimbursement for expenses incurred in the dismantling of a wall between properties at 133 Baltimore street and one owned by the defendants.

The petition states that the defendants had agreed to defray one half the expenses incident to the work. Out of a total bill of $1,000 involved in the dismantling operation, the petition contends the executors have paid only $250. Costs incidental to the construction of a new wall are placed at $3,187, leaving a divided balance claimed to be owing $1,843. The petition was filed by Attorney William A. Gunter.

Shop Crafts Unit Protests B. & O. Shutdown Here

Three - Day Stoppage of Work Will Result in Furlough of 130

Five hundred members of the Federation of Shop Crafts of the B. and O. Railroad held a mass meeting at the New theater on Virginia avenue yesterday to protest a scheduled three-day shutdown in the back shops this week followed by a furlough for 105 back shop employees and twenty-five roundhouse employees effective Saturday.

Harold A. Powell, president of the shop crafts federation, presided at the mass meeting where it was decided to file a protest with the organization's general committee in Baltimore.

While the necessity to curtail the heavy repair departments was reported due to business conditions, members of the federation yesterday termed the move unwarranted at this time and an attempt to take advantage of the workers.

The furlough effective Saturday will result in 950 heavy repair employees being laid off throughout the B. and O. system. This number will include 105 men employed in the back shops in Cumberland and twenty-five drop pit workers in the roundhouse.

The three-day shutdown scheduled for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday will affect approximately 5,000 heavy repair employees throughout the system.

An estimated 480 heavy repair workers in the Cumberland back shops will be obliged to lay off for three days if the scheduled program goes through. This number includes both back shop and roundhouse workers.

Craft union officials and departmental chairmen who assisted Powell in conducting yesterday's mass meeting included John R. Gries, vice-president of the federation; Randolph Robbette, secretary; Frank E. Tarrington, chairman of the machinists; George Busker, chairman of the pipe fitters; John F. Campbell, chairman of the carmen; and P. W. Yarnall, chairman of the electrical workers.

Seal Sale Aids County Clinics

396 Examined at Twelve Clinics This Year, Weiss Reports

Twelve chest clinics have been held and 396 patients have been examined in Allegany county during the past year as a result of the sale of Christmas Seals. It was announced yesterday by Harvey E. Weiss, chairman of the thirty-fourth annual Christmas Seal Sale.

Weiss said that these clinics, with X-ray facilities, are conducted in cooperation with the County Health Department and are financed by the proceeds of the Christmas Seal Sale, which is now under way.

Christmas Seal funds also help maintain 120 undernourished children at the Kiwanis Sunshine camp, located on Haystack mountain, Weiss said.

For thirty-four years public spirited citizens have been waging a peaceful but militant war against tuberculosis in this county and during that time great inroads have been made and results have been gratifying.

Before an organized effort had been made to stamp out the disease, the death rate in Maryland was 204.1 a hundred thousand. After thirty-four years the death rate has been lowered to about seventy-five a hundred thousand.

One million Christmas seals were mailed to persons throughout the county on Saturday. The seals sell for $1 a sheet or one cent each and a purchase of same is considered an investment in the good health of the community. The campaign will be concluded at Christmas.
